Women Offender Statistical Overview

Fiscal Year 2009-2010

Introduction

The majority of the tables in this document focus on the regional institutions (Nova Institution for Women, Établissement Joliette, Grand Valley Institution for Women, Okimaw Ohci Healing Lodge, Edmonton Institution for Women and Fraser Valley Institution. However, where appropriate, data is also included from Isabel McNeil (Ontario)¹ and the Regional Psychiatric Centre (Prairies).

Here are a few key points of interest in the following report:

- The last inmate left Prison for Women in May 2000;
- Nova Institution for Women opened in 1995 and the Secure Unit opened in January 2003;
- Joliette Institution opened in 1997 and the Secure Unit opened in May 2003;
- Grand Valley Institution for Women opened in 1997 and the Secure Unit opened in October 2004;
- Okimaw Ohci Healing Lodge opened in 1995.
- Edmonton Institution for Women opened in 1995 and the Secure Unit opened in March 2003.
- Fraser Valley Institution opened in 2004 and the Secure Unit opened in March 2006
- Isabel McNeil House closed in December of 2008.
- There has been an increase of 18% in the federal women offender population since March 31, 2006. This represents an increase of 23% for women incarcerated and an increase of 13% for women who are presently in the community.
- The Prairie Region has the highest proportion of incarcerated women offenders. As of March 31, 2010 the Prairie Region accounts for 33% of the total incarcerated women offender population;
- On April 25, 2010 the majority of the woman offender population was classified at a medium security level (45%) followed by minimum security (29%);
- On March 31, 2010, 333 women (66%) of the incarcerated federal women offender population were serving time for a violent crime.
- Incarcerated Aboriginal women offenders (164) accounted for 33% of the total incarcerated federal women offender population on March 31, 2010. Aboriginal peoples account for approximately 3.8% of the total Canadian population²;

Definitions

The statistics in this document are presented in two different formats: 1) at a point in time, and 2) over a period of time.

1) at a point in time

This measure is designed to illustrate a situation on a specific date. Each Sunday, CSC takes a "snapshot" of the data in OMS relating to the offenders in each institution across the country. This information is then stored separately from OMS and labeled as having been extracted from OMS on that Sunday's date. These "snapshots" can then be used to compare one institution or region to another at the same point in time. By comparing "snapshots", one point in time can be compared to other points in time on an institutional, regional or national level. Data for incarcerated and community populations are often presented this way.

2) over a period of time

This measure is designed to illustrate specific events occurring between two dates. This information can be used to identify trends in events over a period of time. The information can be viewed nationally, regionally or institutionally and can be compared from one time period to another. Offender admissions and releases are regularly presented this way

Other:

Most of the tables provide information on the total population and then a more specific breakdown of the Aboriginal vs. Non-Aboriginal populations.

Admissions for Revocations with Outstanding Charges at the Regional Facilities per Fiscal Year

- As of June 2000, a new temporary admission type has been added to the Offender Management System, "revocation with outstanding charges". When the charges are resolved, this admission type was modified to show revocation with offence or revocation without offence;
- As there are too few admissions with outstanding charges at the regional facilities, the data is not included in a table and has not been included in the total number of revocation admissions;
- In 2006-2007 there were three admissions for revocations with outstanding charges: Edmonton Institution for Women - 2, Fraser Valley Institution -1.

- The time requirements for the completion of the Correctional Plan vary dependent upon the length of sentence. There is a 70-day requirement for sentences of 4 years or less and a 90-day requirement for sentences greater than 4 years (including indeterminate sentences). In both cases, the time frame is measured from the offender's admission date to the date the Correctional Plan is locked. The tables above show the results based upon these standards.

- There was an increase of 18% in releases since fiscal year 2005-2006.

Definition: Releases refer to the offenders' first releases. These releases reflect federal offenders only. It does not include those who move from one type of release to another in the community.

Note: The majority of women offenders are released from a federal facility on Day Parole and convert over to Full Parole once in the community. Other forms of release including warrant expiry and bail are not included in the above table. Day Parole and Full Parole releases are at the discretion of the National Parole Board. Statutory Release is a mandatory form of release unless there is reason to believe that a person will commit a violent offence prior to their Warrant Expiry Date.
