KENT COUNTY TASK FORCE ON FAMILY VIOLENCE

CHAIRPERSON'S MESSAGE.

It is with great pride and pleasure that the Kent County Task Force on Family Violence releases the results of a nine month research project, funded by the Federal Solicitor General's Office, which investigated family violence in Kent County.

On behalf of the Task Force members, I extend our sincere gratitude to the social agencies, police departments, members of the legal and medical professions, members of the clergy, and members of the general public who completed the necessary questionnaires. Without their co-operation this report would not have been possible.

In closing, I would personally like to take this opportunity to thank all the members of the Task Force Committee for their support and dedication.

. . PATRICIA J. SALES.

KENT COUNTY TASK FORCE
ON FAMILY VIOLENCE

. . . background

Since the inception of the Kent County Task Force on Family Violence in November of 1981, the media, government, courts and the general public are coming to appreciate that family violence is a significant social problem in the Kent County area. What follows is a discussion of possible reasons for such an attitudinal shift in this community.

The recognition of Family Violence as an issue needing to be addressed was not only a gradual process but also one in which a number of agencies and groups played important roles. In retrospect it may seem as though things simply "came to a head" and proceeded from there, however, those involved know that it has been a long, hard road. At the risk of offending individuals or smaller groups in this complicated evolution, this history is here condensed to its key elements.

In October of 1979, the Chatham-Kent Women's Centre opened its doors to women in crisis, and their children. One of its primary mandates was to provide the community at large with education and awareness about the issues of domestic violence. To this end the Centre developed a public speaking programme to address local service agencies and groups, churches, high school students and other organizations in the county. The aim was not only to make people aware of the existence of the Centre and its services, but to inform them of the statistics, myths about batterers and victims, and the social nature of the entire problem.

In the fall of 1980, the Centre initiated the organization of a co-operative workshop to address the issues and problems surrounding family violence situations. The workshop became a joint effort and was sponsored by eleven other local agencies:

- 1) the Provincial Court - Family Division
- 2) the Chatham Police Department
- 3) Mental Health Kent
- 4) the Lester B. Pearson Centre for Children and Youth
- 5) the Ministry of Community and Social Services
- 6) the District Health Council
- 7) Chatham-Kent Community and Family Services
- 8) the Kent County Children's Aid Society
- 9) St. Clair College

- 10) the Addiction and Research Foundation
- 11) the Wallaceburg Day Care Centre

Clearly, these various agencies suspected a widespread problem and confronted evidence of it on a daily basis. What each lacked was knowledge of how other agencies were combatting violence in the family setting; what each sought was perhaps to bring co-operative problem solving efforts to deal with such violence. Whatever their motivation for sponsoring the workshop, one was in fact held. It was considered to be very successful; it served to bring everyone's concerns and suggestions into the open and it served to give direction to future efforts in this area by focusing attention on the necessity of examining the community's response to families in crisis.

Kent County continued to grapple with the problem of violence within the family, as did other communities and agencies across the province, indeed the country. Events at the federal and provincial levels of government suggested that such efforts, or the need for such efforts, were not going unnoticed. Both instituted Task Forces to investigate family violence and wife battering respectively within the broader context of:

- 1) victims of crime (Federal)
- 2) family violence (Provincial)

The resulting reports were extensive but from both emerged the following recommendations:

- 1) the initiation of changes in the court, legal and education systems.
- 2) the increase of funding to those programmes aimed at assisting victims of crime.

In 1982, the Ministries of the Attorney General and the Solicitor General took the following initiatives:

- 1) the Attorney General wrote to all Crown Attorneys in the province, directing them to prosecute all cases of wife battering.
- 2) the Solicitor General wrote to all police forces in the province, emphasizing that the police should lay charges in wife battering incidents where there existed reasonable and probable grounds for such charges.

These initiatives received widespread press coverage and assisted the cause of those seeking to draw attention not only to the scope of violence within the family, but also to the lack of adequate and effective remedies.

It was recognized that to effectively implement these directives, police officers required specialized training. To meet this need, the Ontario Police College placed more stress on its Crisis Intervention Training for recruits, and included similar education experiences in its advanced training for officers, such training usually occurring at five year intervals. Since domestic dispute calls tend to be frustrating as well as dangerous for the officers involved, training aimed at diffusing these volatile situations not only better equips the officers to handle them, it also educates them as to the dynamics involved. Such knowledge, coupled with the new alternatives open to them, allows the officers to inform both the abusers and victims of their situation and the potential consequences thereof. Educating the participants in such violence, albeit that such participation may be passive, should not be overlooked.

1982 should go down in the annals of history, history that is, pertinent to the combatting of family violence. The reasons for the significance of that year are as follows:

- 1) 1982 saw the institution of the previously mentioned federal and provincial Task Forces.
- 2) 1982 saw the initiatives taken by the government of Ontario in its efforts to combat family violence, i.e. directives from the Attorney General and the Solicitor General.
- 3) 1982 saw the successful application for funding, to the Federal Solicitor General's Office from the Kent County Task Force on Family Violence, for the purpose of instituting a research project to investigate family violence in Kent County, including research into the community's response to families in crisis.

The success of the Kent County's Task Force in obtaining funding has been attributed to the following factors:

- 1) Kent County's population is quite unique in that 60% reside in urban communities, while 40% reside in rural areas.
- 2) Kent County is serviced by four municipal police departments and five detachments of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Whatever the reasons, funding was obtained and in July of 1983, Phase I (feasibility study) of the Task Force was launched. It should be explained that the Task Force's Committee contemplated three phases in this project:

- Phase I - the feasibility study
- Phase II - the implementation of the recommendations of Phase I, if appropriate
- Phase III - the successful integration of services from Phase II into existing social service agencies.

The project staff was supervised on a day to day basis by a committee of five, with the full Committee of twenty-one meeting regularly on a monthly basis to provide the guidance and support necessary to ensure the successful completion of Phase I of the Kent County Task Force on Family Violence.

All this activity at federal, provincial and local levels pertaining to family violence gave rise to increased public education and awareness of the problem. That family violence was indeed a problem became more apparent and the issues more clearly defined. Despite these advances in the cause, those involved with violence on a daily basis in Kent County realize that much remains to be done. Public education has gradually increased the County's awareness of the existence of such violence in the community, however, recognition of the extent of family violence and our lack of adequate and effective solutions is by no means widespread.

The purpose of this segment of the report was to discuss possible reasons for what was described as the community's "attitudinal change" towards family violence. Emerging from this discussion is the realization that while no single organization or event can be credited with bringing about this change, in the forefront was the Chatham-Kent Women's Centre Inc. Not only was there a multitude of individuals and groups striving towards such a goal, there was also a number of other events occurring simultaneously at the provincial and federal levels directed towards the same end. Not to be overlooked in this entire process is the role of the local media. The Chatham Daily News, the London Free Press and radio station CFCO have been of particular assistance due to their co-operation in keeping family violence issues in the public eye, not to mention their periodic progress reports of the project itself.

It is hoped that this brief historical overview of Kent County's struggle against family violence will enhance your reading of the statistical and other information presented in the following report. This report represents not only the culmination of nine month's of intensive research, but also several years of battling uphill against what can only be described as society's apathy towards family violence and its victims.

In this, Chatham's first and last battle, two Americans were killed and four wounded. . . The Indians left two dead. .

(from: "Some Historical Notes on the County of Kent."
The Kent Historical Society, Chatham, March 15, 1948.)

Tecumseh, Britain's great ally, who has been described as possibly the greatest Indian of all time, was killed in this action:

A little further up stream, near the present C.P.R. bridge at Pikeville, the British bateaux, which had accompanied the forces in their retreat, were fired and abandoned, with most of Proctor's ammunition. A few days later Tecumseh, abandoned by his British ally, fell fighting at Moraviantown.

(from: "Some Historical Notes. . .")

In an article in the London Free Press on October 26, 19^b83, Frances Huff wrote:

The battle at Moraviantown in October 1813, which made a scapegoat of Major-General Proctor, bestowed on the Indian Chief Tecumseh the aspects of the great mythical hero. Throughout all history the legendary hero's death must be fraught with mystery and this is very true of Tecumseh's. The varying accounts of his death are only exceeded by the number of his tomahawks which numerous Kent County citizens claim to possess.

How he met his death and where he is buried is still the subject of speculation.

Kent County is rich in historical events much to numerous to mention here. A great deal of this history has been recorded and is available at the various museums in the county as well as the Chatham Public Library and the Kent County Public Library. Some other significant dates in this fascinating history are:

- 1790 In Blenheim, Ontario, Alexander McKee came to a peaceful land purchase agreement with local Indians. This agreement opened up much of Southwestern Ontario to settlers.
- 1802 St. Peter's Church, at Jeanette's Creek just north of Tilbury, was established. This was the first parish in Kent County.
- 1803 The "Scots Settlement" at Baldoon, quite close to the thriving Town of Wallaceburg, was established by Lord Selkirk.
- 1830 Rev. Josiah Hensen escaped, with his family, from Kentucky to Upper Canada and later established the British American Institute, a vocational school and refuge for fugitive slaves, in the Dresden area.

- 1849 Buxton, named for abolitionist Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, was founded by the Rev. William King, a one-time slave owner. He built a church-school for former slaves. Within a year, white children were attending the school and it is believed to be the first integrated school in North America.
- 1850 Municipal powers were granted to Kent County.
- 1855 Chatham was incorporated as a town.
- 1858 Abolitionist John Brown and his followers met in Chatham at what is now the First Baptist Church. Chatham was a northern terminus of the Underground Railroad.
- 1895 Chatham was constituted a city.
- 1922 The Ridgetown College of Agricultural Technology was established. It was originally an experimental farm, and in 1951 went to its present format. Its 180 hectares of land are used for both research and to grow feed for college herds.

A BRIEF GEOGRAPHY

Kent County fronts off Lake Erie, lying west of Elgin and Middlesex Counties, South of Lambton County and east of Essex County. It is comprised of:

1. ten townships - Camden, Chatham, Harwich, Howard, Orford, Raleigh, Romney, Tilbury East and Zone.
2. five villages - Erieau, Erie Beach, Highgate, Thamesville, and Wheatley.
3. six towns - Blenheim, Bothwell, Dresden, Ridgetown, Tilbury, and Wallaceburg.
4. one city - Chatham, which is the county seat.

Kent has been described as "The Golden Acres County" and is Ontario's premiere agricultural centre. This "banana belt" owes its mild weather to the fact that it is located between three large bodies of water namely Lake Huron, Lake Erie and Lake St. Clair, with the waters of the latter two forming Kent's shoreline.

Due to its favourable climate, long growing season and flat terrain, Kent County is well suited for agriculture and related manufacturing and service industries. Its total acreage exceeds six hundred thousand (600,000) of which more than five hundred and ninety five thousand (595,000) is considered to be the best agricultural land in the Province of Ontario. The towns and villages in the County account for approximately nine thousand (9,000) acres and the City of Chatham, which is centrally located within the County, accounts for approximately five thousand (5,000) acres.

Statistics Canada's Census of 1981 documents Kent County's population to be one hundred and seven thousand and twenty two (107,022) of which sixty nine thousand and eleven (69,011) or 64% of the population is located in urban areas while thirty eight thousand and eleven (38,011) or 36% is located in rural areas. (A more detailed breakdown of the population will be included under "Demographic" information).

The urban centres satisfy the housing requirements of individuals retiring from the farm labour force in addition to supplying services required by agricultural and other industries. Rich agricultural land, a wide variety of industries together with an abundance of recreational areas and facilities are all found in Kent County.

ECONOMIC ACTIVITY

The County of Kent has a varied economy from prosperous agricultural land to light and heavy industry. A pamphlet entitled "Look at Kent" reveals the following:

- KENT is Ontario's top corn producing county.
- KENT grows about 8.8% of grain corn produced in Canada.
- KENT is Ontario's largest producer of soybeans.
- KENT grows 20 tonnes to the acre in tomatoes which is the major share of all tomatoes in Ontario.
- KENT has the largest concentration of pedigreed seed growers of any county in Ontario.
- KENT is one of the province's top growers of asparagus.
- KENT grows the majority of all Ontario's burley leaf tobacco.
- KENT annually produces more beef and hogs than the three Maritime provinces put together.

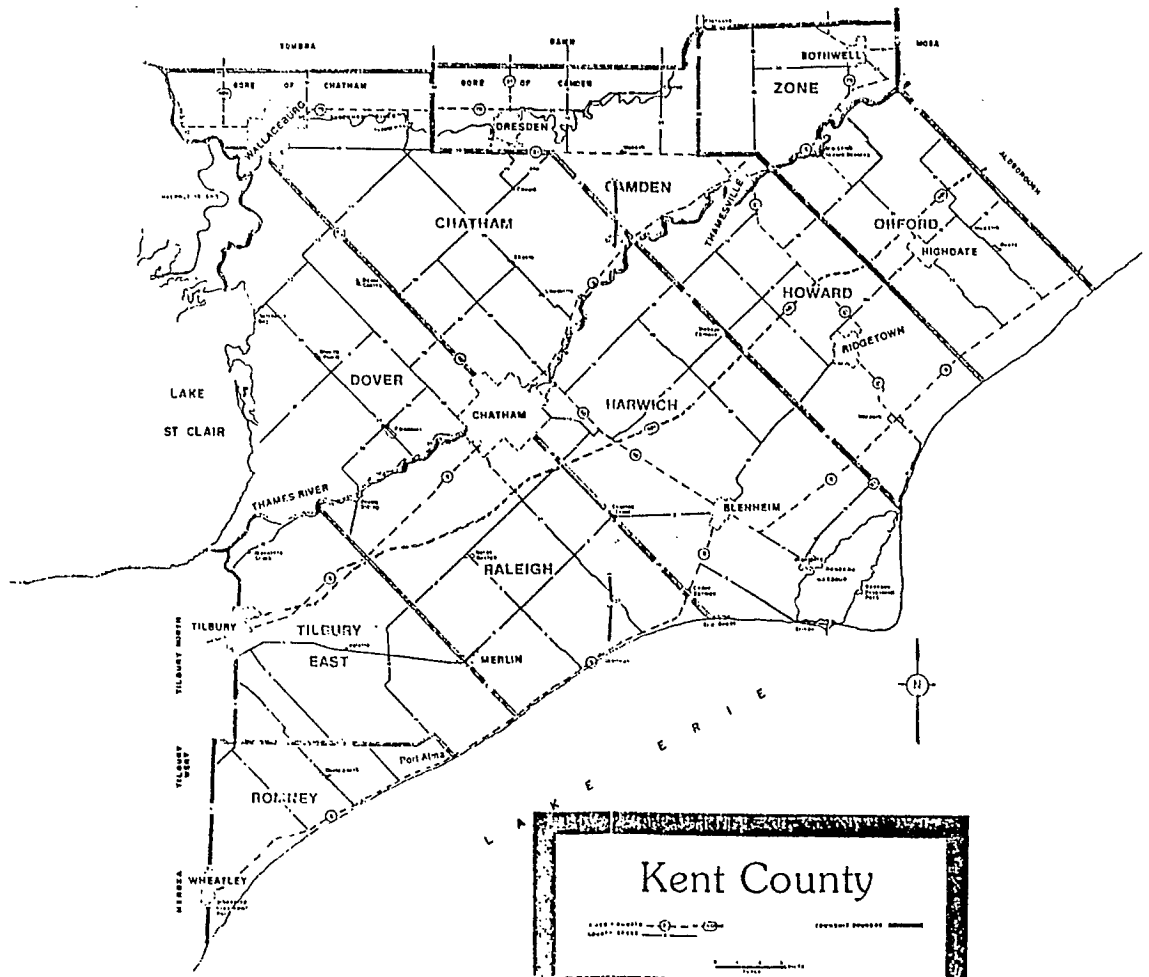

As a result of all this agricultural produce, large and smaller food processing plants have been established throughout the County in Blenheim, Chatham, Merlin, Paincourt, Stoney Point, Tilbury and Wallaceburg.

The role of manufacturing in Kent County's economy is of major importance. Chatham is the largest industrial centre in the County with the manufacture of large motor trucks, automobile parts, machine parts and a variety of metal products, occurring within its boundaries. In Wallaceburg, the second largest industrial centre, manufactured goods consist of glassware, brass fittings, aluminum goods and parts for the automotive industry. Not to be overlooked is its metal plating and plastics manufacturing as well as several small scale metal and engineering units making castings, tool and dies, and precision engineered components.

The manufacture of heating and ventilation equipment, metal stampings, plastic products and truck axles cocurs in Tilbury, the third largest industrial centre in the County.

Erieau, Merlin, Stoney Point and Wheatley are mainly food and fish processing communities, while Blenheim, Ridgetown, Thamesville, Bothwell and Dresden manufacture an assortment of goods such as zinc and aluminum brass alloys, auto parts, steel wool, pillows, stools, hassocks, furniture, awnings, metal stampings, and hardware products.

A very detailed and comprehensive study of the Kent County Labour Force was undertaken by the Chatham Office of the Canada Employment Centre (C.E.C.). The results of this study are available through the Chatham office of the C.E.C. This three volume study is a veritable storehouse of information pertaining to the labour market in Kent County.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS, 1981 - 1983.

The years 1981 - 1982 saw an economy that was on the decline. It was a period which "was best forgotten" as one mortgage broker stated when met with inquiries as to the number of mortgage sales and foreclosures that had occurred during this period. Such information was not forthcoming as it was considered much too sensitive. Suffice it to say that too many individuals lost their homes due to unemployment and high interest rates, amidst other problems.

It was generally felt that in 1983 there was some improvement, a fact that is borne out by statistical information pertaining to real estate sales, though it should be pointed out that the period covered by this report is 1981 - July 31, 1983. Whether the healthy increase was maintained throughout 1983 has not been determined for the purposes of this study.

The Chatham-Kent Real Estate Board boasts a membership of 138 county wide. While they do not claim to have the total figures for Kent County, the figures they provided do give some indication of the state of the market during the years in question.

RESIDENTIAL UNITS

YEAR	$ AMT. OF SALES	# OF UNITS	UNIT PRICE
1981	$15,907,850.	329	$48,352.
1982	$18,304,025.	393	$44,030.
July 31, 1983.	$14,309,696.	315	$45,427.

These figures are multiple listing sales only, private sales figures are not available from the Board. The 1981 figures represented a 12% decrease over 1980 and while 1982's figures were higher than 1981, the price of houses saw a substantial decline and this had only increased marginally during the first seven months of 1983 despite the sharp increase in the number of units sold.

Unemployment figures for the 1981 - 1983 period are included under demographic information to give some idea of conditions during the years in question. To help alleviate the unemployment situation, Federal and Provincial job creation efforts resulted in thirteen million, one hundred and fifty thousand, two hundred and ninety two dollars ($13,150,292.) * being spent to create two thousand and seventy four (2074) jobs, of which three hundred and sixteen (316) were student positions.

* Source, Office of Maurice Bossy, M.P. for Kent.

Based on 1981 = 100, the *Consumer Price Index for the period 1981 - July, 1983 was as follows:

1981, January	94.6
December	104.7
1982, January	105.4
December	114.4
1983, January	114.1
December	117.9

Only two months per year are included here since the purpose is that of illustrating the kind of financial pressures, beyond the control of the individual, to which Canadians were exposed during the period covered by this study, rather than any detailed financial analysis. These pressures came at a time when many found themselves without work and eventually without even unemployment insurance. It was at this point many had to resort to seeking assistance from the local welfare offices which report the following information:

City of Chatham				County of Kent
Month	1981	1982	1983	Month	1981	1982	1983
January	421	518	625	January	269	370	566
February	462	551	622	February	288	402	554
March	437	499	659	March	312	451	571
April	413	519	647	April	282	453	565
May	406	499	629	May	234	445	437
June	394	483	538	June	201	410	378
July	397	463	477	July	186	371	338
August	332	438	438	August	157	319	324
September	272	403	409	September	155	321	304
October	354	462	342	October	171	344	320
November	442	583	470	November	209	412	382
December	439	577	461	December	301	513	420

The years 1981 - July of 1983 were not the best of times. It would appear that the later part of 1983 showed some improvement and it can only be hoped that this trend will continue.

The information in this segment of the report is included for the sole purpose of providing background information on conditions in Kent County against which data on family violence will be presented. One final detail requires some comment - Bill C-165, an Act to provide for financial assistance for industrial development in all regions of Canada, was passed by the House of Commons, June 29, 1983.

* Source, Canadian Almanac and Directory, 1984.

This Act divides the country into districts which are further divided into four tiers. We are informed that the regions designated in the tiers will not remain static as the tier designations will be evaluated annually against changes in the statistical data. The designations for the tri-county area of Essex, Kent and Lambton are TIER II, TIER I and TIER I respectively.

A summary of this programme is included so that the impact of being designated TIER I can be felt. The fact that Essex County has been designated TIER II is seen as jeopardizing Kent County's recovery rate as the latter's rate of assistance for future development is less than that of Essex County. The municipal governments in Kent County have already appealed their TIER I designation but have not been informed of the result of this appeal.

UPDATE

The provincial government recently gave the City of Chatham an unconditional grant in the amount of one hundred and fourteen thousand dollars ($114,000), the purpose of which is to alleviate the tax burden on city residents. The allocation of this grant was based on the following factors:

- i) the city's recovery rate is slower than anticipated
- ii) the city's unemployment rate stands at 12%

The promise of 1983 appears to have dissipated. . .

The above figures were supplied by the Canada Employment Centres in Chatham and Wallaceburg. While the Centres do not guarantee the accuracy of these figures, they suffice to demonstrate the extent of unemployment during the period covered by this study.

The "Average UE per quarter" figure was determined by averaging the quarterly reports by the Canada Employment Centres. In other words, the figures shown represent the number of unemployed at the end of any three month period during the year indicated.

SURVEY OF
SOCIAL SERVICE AGENCIES

Introduction

The purpose of the research described in this section was to determine the services provided by various agencies, groups and individuals in the Chatham-Kent geographical area. This research focused on:

- a) Overlap of services.
- b) Provision of services to Kent County residents living outside of the City of Chatham.
- c) Gaps in services.

Of particular concern was the provision of services to those individuals residing outside of Chatham. Sixty percent of Kent County's population live in the towns, villages and farms which surround the centrally located county seat, the City of Chatham. Were their needs being met?

Once it was established which services each agency provided, these were investigated in relation to family violence. In addition, the extent of financial support from the municipal governments of the County of Kent and the City of Chatham relevant to family violence was determined. Recommendations arising from this research are presented at the end of the section.

Methodology

To acquire a general picture of the sources of social services presently provided in Kent County, information was gathered initially from the following sources:

Directory of Community Services for Kent County
Prepared by the Chatham Public Library
September, 1982.

Mental Health Services in Kent County
A report of the Kent County District Health Council
3rd Edition - October, 1983.

Taxonomy of Social Services for Kent County
Prepared for the Social Planning Council of the United Way of Chatham-Kent, 1984.

Based on this information, a chart was prepared with various kinds of services listed across the top. Down the left side of the chart was listed the relevant agencies or groups referred to in the above taxonomies. Types of services included in this chart were those which seemed most relevant in dealing with, or preventing, situations of actual or potential family violence. Since stress brought home from work was recognized as a possible contributing factor in abusive situations, those agencies which would support employers interested in setting up a stress relief programme for their employees, were identified (see column 8).

A. Overlap of Services

It was found that several agencies provided a similar service, e.g. crisis intervention, youth counselling and family life education. However, the general consensus of opinion was as follows:

- 1) Services were tailored to the mandate of the individual agency, therefore the focus was different from agency to agency.
- 2) Services did not overlap.

The opinion that there was no overlap of services was not shared by all contact persons. Three individuals identified two areas of overlap:

1) In the area of mental health

The suggestion was made that Mental Health/Kent should provide only public education programmes. Treatment and support programmes for those who have mental health problems should be entirely under the umbrella of the providers of health services.

2) In the area of child care

Provision of stimulation programmes for children with physical and/or mental disabilities is provided by the Children's Treatment Centre, the Kent-Chatham Health Unit, and the Southwestern Regional Centre. It was felt that this situation could and should be remedied.

B. Provision of Service in the County

In order to gain some insight into the delivery of service to people living outside the city, professionals in local agencies were questioned in this regard. Several knowledgeable people in the county were also contacted and freely expressed their perceptions of services to county residents.

It was generally acknowledged that most agencies serviced more clients from Chatham than from all the rest of the county, although sixty per cent of the population resides in the county. Some agencies, such as the Kent-Chatham Health Unit, have a service network which reaches throughout the county; other agencies, such as the Mental Health Clinic, have a policy that all clients must be served in the agency; while still others, such as Chatham-Kent Community and Family Services, and the L.B.P.C.*, provide a combination of services both in the office and in the home. The ideal situation would appear to be the provision of services in satellite offices scattered throughout the county. Legal Assistance Kent presently has such offices in Moraviantown, Tilbury and Wallaceburg. These offices are manned on a regular basis.

* Lester B. Pearson Centre for Children and Youth

While it was felt that county residents would respond favourably to services being provided locally, concern was expressed as to the confidentiality of those services. The problem here was one of being identified as an individual requiring assistance in a specific area. How this "approach-avoidance" situation can be remedied is a problem to be addressed by the providers of services if and when expansion outside of Chatham is considered.

However, despite the concerns raised it was generally agreed that the local provision of services was the greatest need. It would appear that office space would be readily available for such purposes. The Moravian town Indian Reserve worker particularly expressed the need for a variety of services, provided these were available on the Reserve.

Tilbury's H.E.L.P. Centre serviced two thousand people in 1983. If the situation warranted further action, referrals were made to the appropriate agency. It was generally the case that clients were willing to go to Chatham once they knew that assistance was available. Indeed, some preferred to go to Chatham where it was felt that a certain degree of anonymity was guaranteed.

Two urban areas outside of Chatham have seen an increase in the services available locally. Wallaceburg and Tilbury, the second and third largest municipalities respectively, have acquired increased social services or so we were informed. While these services were not specifically identified, it was felt that this increase had been accompanied by a greater awareness of services available in Chatham. Despite this improvement it is quite apparent that:

- 1) Eastern and southern areas of the county are woefully lacking in social services.
- 2) Rural residents do not utilize social services in any great numbers.

Possible reasons for this situation have been attributed to the following:

- 1) Lack of awareness of available services since these are centrally located in Chatham.
- 2) Some people have a transportation problem and are unable to go to Chatham in order to take advantage of provided services.
- 3) Rural people may feel threatened and uncomfortable in the urban setting.
- 4) There is perhaps more extended family and community support in rural areas, thus relieving some of the need for outside help.
- 5) There may be a feeling of isolation due to both physical and psychological factors.

A complicating factor with respect to the Bothwell and Wheatley areas is that telephone calls to Chatham are long distance. Wheatley is not even in the Kent County telephone directory! Access to, indeed knowledge of, available services is difficult in these circumstances. In fact, a perusal of the Kent County telephone directory by project staff for the purpose of locating services, proved to be quite frustrating. This situation will be addressed in the "Recommendations" at the end of the chapter.

There are problems of time, education and cost in providing adequately for the needs of the majority of Kent County's population. However, there may be hope on the horizon. Traditionally, the Chatham-Kent United Way has focused its campaign drive in the city of Chatham. This campaign was recently successfully expanded to Wallaceburg and Tilbury. Future campaigns are planned throughout the county. It is hoped that this proposed expansion will bring a sense of unity to all residents of Kent County with positive results in terms of providing needed services to the total population.

One final comment on the provision of services outside of Chatham. Contact persons in the County expressed opinions from having excellent co-operation from the Chatham based agencies to experiencing an elitist attitude on the part of workers in some of the agencies. It would appear that a communication problem exists between the Chatham providers of service and their counterparts outside the city.

C. Gaps in Services

"Chatham-Kent's social services are the most inadequate in Ontario, if not in Canada", was one respondent's comment. Given the fact that agency contacts were quite voluble on the subject of "gaps in service," there may be a great deal of support for this comment, at least in some areas.

1. The most frequently expressed concerns centred around services for children and youth. These included:
 - i) Assessment and treatment for mental and emotional problems.
 - ii) Temporary housing and group homes for adolescents up to nineteen (19) years of age.
 - iii) Drug and alcohol treatment programmes.
 - iv) Life skills training programmes for youth.
 - v) Advocates for children. (15)*
2. The need for expanded mental health services for adults, youth and children, was also referred to frequently. These included:

* number who identified gap

- i) More government funded psychiatric and psychological services.
- ii) The Mental Health Clinic's services be expanded to include services for children, e.g. assessment.
- iii) The Lester B. Pearson Centre implement more extensive testing and treatment for children.

While it was generally conceded that services to adults required expansion, again most of the perceived needs centred around the provision of such services to children. There was a division of opinion as to the need locally for an in-patient treatment facility for children with mental or emotional health problems, but most were in agreement that more testing, assessment and out-patient treatment should be available in Kent County.

(10)*

Other areas of perceived gaps in service included the need for:

- a) Social Services during the evening hours.
- b) Subsidised family housing and emergency housing for adults.
- c) Self-help groups for:
 - i) Abusers.
 - ii) Victims of Abuse.
 - iii) Single mothers.
 - iv) A crisis intervention team working with police.
 - v) Educational upgrading for illiterate and poorly educated adults.
 - vi) Income support for adults returning to school.
 - vii) More funding for the Chatham-Kent Women's Centre.
 - viii) More day care facilities.
 - ix) A sexual assault crisis centre.
 - x) Continued funding for a youth counsellor operating from Chatham-Kent Community and Family Services.
 - xi) Drug and alcohol abuse treatment programmes to be expanded in three identified areas:
 - a) A detoxification centre for men and women.
 - b) Service for senior citizens.
 - c) Service for 14 - 20 year olds.
 - xii) Palliative care.

While there were many gaps in services identified, several respondents stressed that existing services were not being fully utilized because:

- i) The public was not well enough informed as to available services.
- ii) Some professionals were not aware of the services offered in other agencies.
- iii) There needs to be a greater degree of confidentiality among all persons and agencies providing services to the public.

* number who identified gap

Five respondents strenuously emphasized the statement in number (iii). Since the successful provision of services is dependent upon the assurance of confidentiality, it is imperative that all individuals employed in the helping professions, irrespective of capacity, convey this assurance to their consumers. The question arises as to the nature of this perceived lack of confidentiality. Ours is a small community. It may well be that agency clientele either:

- i) know agency staff, or
- ii) are seen to enter the agency.

These facts may contribute to a perceived lack of confidentiality rather than actual fault in the agency. Another factor may be the utilization of more than one service agency by certain clients. In these circumstances, confidentiality may appear non-existent. Whatever the basis of this alleged problem, it is of sufficient importance to merit attention from all providers of service.

SOCIAL SERVICES AND FAMILY VIOLENCE

The initial reaction from many agencies when first approached for statistical information dealing specifically with family violence was that such violence did not surface very often in their day to day operation. However, as they attempted to complete the various questionnaires, they came to the realization that indeed, violence in the family system did occur more often than they had initially believed.

While existing statistics did not indicate family violence as a main reason for help being sought, a perusal of their files made many agency staff realize that this type of violence was often part of the greater problem for which treatment was being given - an example of the research process heightening, in this instance, professional awareness of family violence.

Those agencies whose primary service is dealing with family violence, e.g. The Kent County Children's Aid Society and the Chatham-Kent Women's Centre Inc., know that the problem is more widespread than statistics indicate. The issue to be addressed is how to ensure that participants in family violence receive the required help rather than become lost in the maze of social service agencies.

MUNICIPAL RESPONSE TO FAMILY VIOLENCE

The Social Service Departments of both the County of Kent and the City of Chatham have contracts with Chatham-Kent Community and Family Services which provide for payment of emergency counselling sessions, to a limit of

. three, for families in crisis. This is certainly one avenue through which family violence problems can be reached.

The Women's Centre opens its doors to women in crisis. The crisis being faced by these women is usually abuse from their spouse. In those instances where the women qualify for welfare, both municipal governments provide funding on a per diem basis for their respective clients. This funding includes provision for children who accompany their mothers to the Centre.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The recommendations listed here arise solely in the context of social service agencies and their delivery of service.

1. Agency personnel have identified the possible existence of a lack of awareness on the part of some professionals to the services offered by other agencies.

Recommendation: An intensive professional education campaign should be undertaken to inform agency staff of, and co-ordinate, services available through the social services network in Kent County.

2. Agency personnel have indicated that their services are not well known by members of the public.

Recommendations: a) An intensive public education campaign should be undertaken to inform the public of the services available to them through the social service network in Kent County.

b) Social service agencies should consider advertising their services, on a regular basis, in local newspapers.

3. Locating telephone numbers for some of the agencies has been proved to be a difficult task.

Recommendation: Social service agencies should ensure that their agency is listed in the yellow pages of the telephone book under "Social Service Organizations".

THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM

Prior to March of 1983, most charges arising from incidents of family violence were dealt with in the Provincial Court - Criminal Division, presided over by His Honor Judge C.E. Perkins. Since March of 1983, simple assault charges have been dealt with in the Provincial Court - Family Division, presided over by His Honor Judge L.G. DeKoning. In the latter setting, Judge DeKoning presides in the capacity of a judge of the Criminal Court and the court over which he presides is a Criminal Court.

The division is that the summary offences (e.g. simple assault) are heard by Judge DeKoning, while the indictable offences (e.g. aggravated assault) are heard by Judge Perkins.

In all instances, family violence refers not only to spousal abuse but includes parental and sibling abuse. Indeed, it refers to any violence which occurs within the family. This means that cases heard by the Family Court judge sitting in the capacity of a Criminal Court judge, are not limited to those incidents which involve only spouses.

The police lay the charges and the Crown Attorney prosecutes these charges. This division of labour results in the fact that the victims of crimes, including victims of family violence, deal mainly with police officers. They interview the witnesses and gather the required evidence, the Crown Attorney presents this information in court in accordance with the rules of evidence.

For a variety of reasons, more often than not, the Crown Attorney's only contact with the victims and their witnesses, if any, is just prior to trial. During this interview the Crown is in possession of all the evidence and can quickly apprise himself of the situation. The actual prosecution of a case becomes almost a technical matter in which the Crown's expertise in presenting the evidence is of prime importance.

If the Crown Attorney has any contact with victims of family violence prior to trial, it is usually in circumstances where they wish the charges to be withdrawn. It may be possible to describe the prosecution of a case as technical, but not so the Crown's function when such a request is made. These requests involve the exercising of the prosecutor's discretion which focuses attention on the Administration of Justice itself.

The Administration of Justice is not something that should be interfered with unless for good reason. When such a request is received by the Crown Attorney's office in Kent County, an exhaustive investigation of the situation is undertaken. Included in this investigation are the following considerations:

- i) is there a history of family violence
- ii) what is the extent of injuries, if any
- iii) was alcohol a factor in the incident
- iv) what is the relationship of the participants
- v) how long in this relationship
- vi) is the Children's Aid Society involved
- vii) has there been any previous withdrawals

It is also the practice of the local Crown Attorney's office to have a police officer visit the home of the victim, assess the situation and thus update existing information. Once in possession of this information a decision is made with respect to withdrawing or proceeding with the charge as laid.

It would appear that more attention is showered on victims who request that charges be withdrawn than on those victims who do not. The reason for this apparent "flaw" in the system stems from the difference between the previously mentioned functions, i.e. the act of prosecution and the exercising of discretion, which place the Crown in two very different roles, the former relatively technical, the latter which cannot be so described.

This dual function, in addition to the fact that the Crown's only contact with victims generally occurs just prior to trial, tends to result in a negative attitude towards Crown Attorneys. They are perceived as being the least helpful in the prosecution process. It would appear that a better understanding of their role in the Criminal Justice System is necessary. Perhaps the proposed "Victims Assistance Programme" referred to recently by Attorney General Roy McMurtry, will be the vehicle through which such understanding is achieved.

STATISTICAL

DATA

INTRODUCTION

For the purposes of this study, Family Violence has been defined as any threat of or physical abuse between family members which includes:

- 1) abuse between siblings
- 2) child abuse
- 3) parents abusing children over 16 years of age (teen abuse)
- 4) parents abused by their children (parental abuse)
- 5) spousal abuse where spouse can be defined as:
 - a) a person who is legally married
 - b) a co-habiting relationship
- 6) extended family abuse
- 7) sexual assaults within "family" relationships (includes primary and extended family members)

The period covered by this research is 1981 - 1982 - up to July 31, 1983.

. . Research not replicable outside Kent County or generalizable outside the study's time frame . .

The following research designs were utilized:

- 1) Secondary Analysis of Existing Data.
- 2) Survey Research.
- 3) Research Interviewing.

RESEARCH DESIGN

DESIGN: Secondary Analysis of Existing Data - analysis of data which has been collected without the prior control or involvement of this research project.

ADVANTAGES:

1. Absence of the investigator from the data collection stages eliminates interviewer's influence or bias.
2. Researcher's absence helps ensure validity and reliability.
3. Demographic Information has high validity.

DISADVANTAGES:

1. Recorder's perceptions affect validity.
2. Inductive research is used - an implicit understanding of what is observed rather than deductive research - an explicit indication of what to observe.
3. Not easily generalizable.
4. Relevant data may be missing.

QUESTIONNAIRES UTILIZING THIS DESIGN:

1. Code Sheet for Police Occurrence Reports
2. Code Sheet for Family Court Files
3. Community Response Questionnaires to Social Services with reference to demographic information obtained from Women's Centre, Children's Aid Society and Community and Family Services.

CODE SHEET FOR POLICE OCCURRENCE REPORTS

- Purpose: To obtain relevant demographic information as to who, when, where, what and resolution of family violence calls.
- Target Group: Police Occurrence records for the years 1981, 1982, and up to July 31, 1983.
- Limitations: 1) Limited access.
2) Data Collection Methods vary from police force to police force.
3) Missing data.
4) Those limitations identified by research design.

CODE SHEET FOR FAMILY COURT FILES

- Purpose: To obtain relevant information with respect to present charges, previous charges, subsequent charges and outcome of each.
- Target Group: Family Court Files for the period of March to July, 1983.
- Limitations: 1) Missing data.
2) Limited access to records for the two and a half year period.
3) Those limitations identified by research design.

COMMUNITY RESPONSE QUESTIONNAIRES TO SOCIAL SERVICES

- Purpose: To obtain relevant demographic information with reference to:
1) Victim and assailant.
2) Services provided and identified gaps in services.
3) Past history of family violence.
- Target Group: Data collected by the Women's Centre and Children's Aid Society and Community and Family Services for the years 1981, 1982 and up to July 31, 1983.
- Limitations: 1) Missing data.
2) Limited access.
3) Those limitations identified by research design.

RESEARCH DESIGN

DESIGN: Survey Research

ADVANTAGES:

1. Considerable savings in comparison to the higher costs of conducting interviews.
2. Considerable time saving, in comparison to the many hours involved in face-to-face interviewing and travel time.
3. Questionnaire completed at respondent's convenience.
4. Greater assurance of anonymity.
5. Standardized wording.
6. No interviewer bias.
7. Possibility of gathering relevant data from personal records or colleagues before answering items.
8. Respondents more accessible by mail than with face-to-face interviews.

DISADVANTAGES:

1. Lack of flexibility in question format, which prevents varying the items or probing (as is possible in interviewing).
2. High potential for low response rate.
3. Use of written responses only; nonverbal behavior and other personal characteristics cannot be documented.
4. No control over the environment of the respondent (e.g. distractions, censorship, or use of another person's answers).
5. No control over the manner in which respondents choose to answer items.
6. Possibility that many items will be left unanswered.
7. Difficult to record spontaneous first responses to items; respondents may record only what they perceive to be requested.
8. Difficult to determine whether questionnaires are not returned because of wrong addresses or because recipients are uninterested in the questionnaire.
9. No control over the date on which respondents answer the items.
10. Complex questionnaire format cannot be used.
11. Possibility of a biased sample, since motivated and curious people might respond and others might not.

QUESTIONNAIRES UTILIZING THIS DESIGN:

1. Community Response to Family Violence - Professionals
- Social Services
2. Police Poll.
3. Rating Sheet of Recommendations from The Community's Response to Family Violence.

10. Identified changes for police responding to Family Violence calls:

- 9 - follow-up by agencies re: visiting, contact cards
- 7 - use caution and understanding
- 5 - don't have enough time to properly evaluate situation and advise re: solutions - have to get back on road
- 4 - more definite procedures in training in approach and communication in domestics
- 3 - have member of social agency attend with police
- 2 - present method satisfactory if enough manpower
- 2 - professional aid for victim, assailant and children
- 2 - more charges laid
- 1 - taken before JP., so won't change their minds
- 1 - Computer Registry System (have all the facts before going)
- 1 - attend without the idea of arrest, but to help and reconcile
- 1 - public education on how police respond to calls
- 1 - most officers assess the situation properly and sympathize with victim - but find it difficult to look into the events which have eroded the relationship over a period of time.

10. (cont'd)

- 1 - dual procedure has been a great assistance (Criminal & family procedure = dual)
- 1 - agency to do initial investigation - determine if police intervention is necessary

11. Areas where Police could improve in handling Family Violence calls:

- 13 - rules and training for how to respond to family violence calls (Social Services and Police)
- 6 - follow-up by agencies
- 5 - use caution, understanding and be a good listener
- 4 - need for more referrals to counselling
- 3 - Computer Registry System (have all facts before going)
- 2 - need more knowledge of social service system in order to do appropriate referrals
- 2 - more enforcement when victim suffers
- 2 - more authority to remove assailant without charging
- 2 - more staff and time to do follow-up
- 1 - agency to do initial investigation and assessment
- 1 - only most qualified officers respond - not all capable of handling this type of complaint
- 1 - drunk be removed until sober
- 1 - victim co-operate
- 1 - closer liaison between police and social service agencies
- 1 - peacebond should be signed by assailant
- 1 - have a police woman at the scene
- 1 - attend with idea of reconciling not arresting
- 1 - stronger support of the courts
- 1 - more time spent recommending agencies and police follow-up at a later date

12. Changes in the way the court system responds to Family Violence:

- 22 - stricter penalties, treat as a criminal offence
- 7 - make victims testify and if not charge with contempt
- 4 - serious assaults punished more severely
- 4 - court response is improving
- 3 - court referrals (possible enforcement) for counselling and treatment for victims, assailant and children
- 2 - solution not found in open court - answer private session
- 1 - more compassion for victims
- 1 - family separate
- 1 - closer relationship between courts and victims for Justice problems

- 1 - assailants treated as criminals - court system should reflect it
- 1 - police lay charges and assailants go to trial
- 1 - court gone too far to protect criminal and not victim
- 1 - conviction not always solution
- 1 - victim have more input in proceedings
- 1 - restitution for damages
- 1 - courts need more consistency
- 1 - victims awareness of legal system and case disposition
- 1 - more protection for victims
- 1 - court should offer an avenue of solutions to both parties
- 1 - too early to tell what effect the system is having - just started laying charges
- 1 - not much is known by the officers of family court as most persons charged plead guilty to assault and the officer rarely attends

13. Comments concerning how the social service agencies respond to Family Violence:

- 8 - education on available services and how they can assist police and community
- 5 - not sure what social service agencies do and how they assist
- 5 - need 24 hour (after hours) and weekend availability
- 2 - do a great job, always respond and do it well
- 2 - always respond and do it well in our city
- 2 - don't become too involved, lack of co-operation, and avoid responding or no response at times when called.
- 2 - treat family not just assailant (family problem)

13. (cont'd)

- 1 - agencies act too slowly and extremely hesitant (CAS extremely hesitant in removing children from violent homes)
- 1 - 50% of agencies - excellent
 - 30% of agencies - good
 - 20% of agencies - poor
- 1 - always left to victim to contact agency
- 1 - wife gets community support - husband makes required payments - need to involve husband
- 1 - no social services to handle domestics
- 1 - respond with tunnel vision
- 1 - higher profile to show victim, police and courts that someone cares
- 1 - social agencies should be heading it off before it takes place
- 1 - social worker, courts and judges can never truly understand what the victim experiences when the violence occurs - deal with controlled atmosphere
- 1 - probation officers should consider having client abstain from alcohol in pre-sentencing report
- 1 - social agencies report it promptly, then change their minds and have the crown withdraw the charge
- 1 - social services should step in and make families get treatment
- 1 - social services are overworked, understaffed, people have become numbers to them.

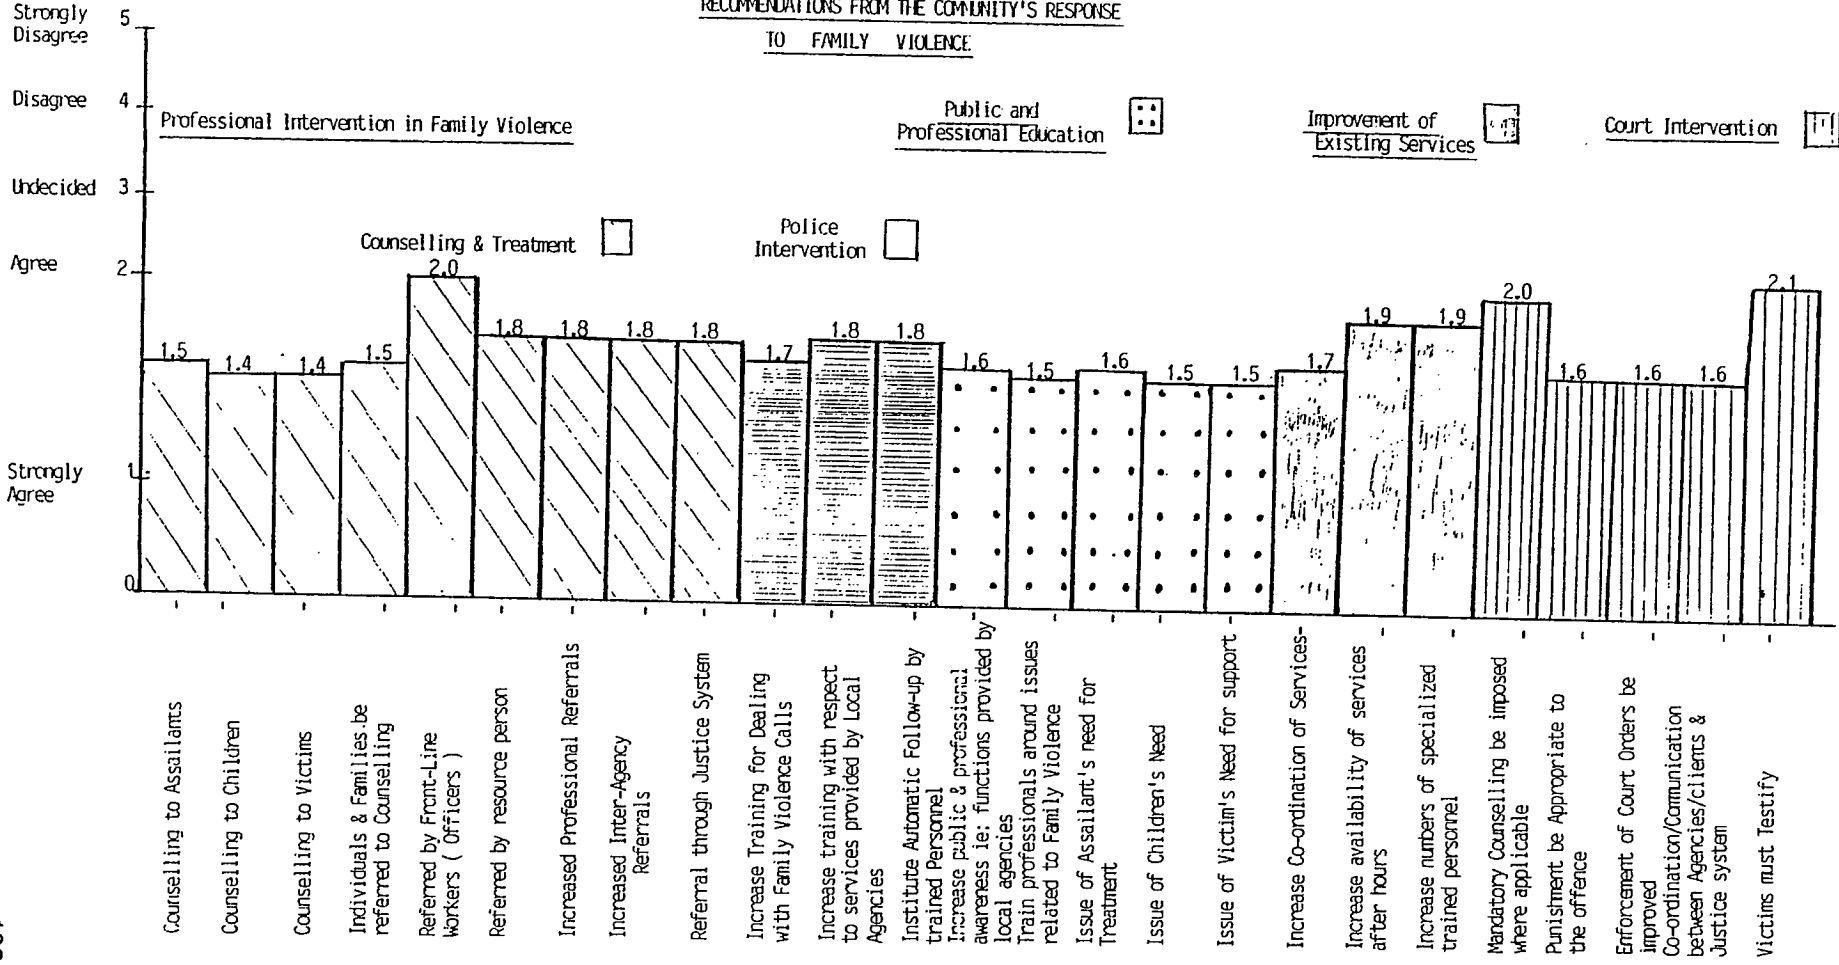

14. Officers' advice to victims of Family Violence:

- 55 - seek counselling (professional, legal, financial and religious help)
- 19 - remove yourself from situation - separate/divorce
- 7 - take court action - stick it out with charges
- 2 - consider future for victim and child to formulate best plan for situation
- 2 - assailant before JP - peacebond
- 1 - can't be forced to get treatment unless they want it
- 1 - don't antagonize partner when they're drinking or after an argument - allow for cooling off period

14. (cont'd)

- 1 - minor assaults - discuss and seek help major assaults - court and prosecute
- 1 - don't drink
- 1 - police should only be called when action is taken
- 1 - third party to help so there is no reoccurrence
- 1 - cannot help victims unless they help themselves
- 1 - depends on the case
- 1 - seek protection from available agencies for victims and children
- 1 - be informed of available services
- 1 - settle problem quickly, so you can go on with life
- 1 - improve home situation
- 1 - learn from their mistakes, attend church, etc.

RESEARCH DESIGN

DESIGN: Research Interviewing

METHOD USED: Structured Interviews

ADVANTAGES:

1. Responses can be obtained in areas where specific questions are difficult to construct or comprehend.
2. Probing techniques can be used but can be limited in a Structured Interview.
3. Exact wording of items reduces the risks of interviewer bias.
4. Consistency in the nature of data collected.
5. Field staff can use with little training - they need only follow specific instructions.
6. High response rate - individuals may take the time to answer if confronted by an interviewer but would not respond by mail.
7. Time requirements are very flexible if a semi- or unstructured schedule is used.
8. Control over environment - thus generalizations of findings may be more certain.

DISADVANTAGES:

1. Identity of respondent is known.
2. Most expensive method and time consuming.
3. Field Staff have little freedom to draw fully on respondent's knowledge of the research question.
4. Results are often a matter of interpretation.
5. Subject to interviewer distortion and influence.

QUESTIONNAIRES UTILIZING THIS DESIGN:

1. Victim's Interview Form
2. Public Poll

VICTIM INTERVIEW FORM

- Purpose: To obtain relevant information regarding:
- 1) demographic information of victim and assailant
 - 2) extent of violence and resolution
 - 3) victim's experiences with:
 - a) Police
 - b) Crown
 - c) Justice of the Peace
 - d) Women's Centre
 - e) Court Proceedings
 - 4) services provided and gaps in services
- Target Group: Victims of Spousal Abuse
- Limitation: 1) Despite media efforts and attempts to have agencies refer clients to the Task Force, the response rate was very low.
- 2) Biased sample - victims came from the Women's Centre.
 - 3) Those limitations identified by research design.
 - 4) Long questionnaire.

PUBLIC POLL

- Design: To obtain relevant information regarding:
- 1) demographic information of respondent and respondent's family
 - 2) respondent's opinion on what is considered acceptable methods of discipline and behavior
 - 3) respondent's opinion of abusers
 - 4) respondent's identification of necessary services for family violence
 - 5) respondent's involvement in family violence
 - 6) services provided to respondent if involved in family violence
- Target Group: Population of Kent County
- Sampling Procedure - Non-probability - Quota Sampling
i.e. matching sex, age, and population distribution of Kent County.
- Limitation: 1) Specific questions were difficult to comprehend.
- 2) Long questionnaire.
 - 3) Some ambiguous terms to lay-people.
 - 4) HONESTY OF THE RESPONDENT
 - 5) THOSE LIMITATIONS IDENTIFIED BY RESEARCH DESIGN

HIGHLIGHTS OF RESEARCH

- Combined figures indicate that a potential 1404 families were involved in family violence during the 2½ years covered by this report.
- Of 1535 responses to the Public Opinion Poll, one (1) out of four (4) indicated an involvement in family violence.
- Of this one (1) in four (4):
 - : 57% were victims, 11% were assailants and 27% were observers.
 - : 34% were involved in spousal abuse, 20% were involved in child abuse, 16% were involved in teen abuse, 13% observed abuse between parents, 12% were involved in sibling abuse and 4% were involved in incest.
- Respondents estimated that 20 - 39% of Kent County families were involved in family violence.
- Kent County residents are not aware of locally available social services.
- Police officers are generally familiar with locally available social services.
- Increased unemployment did not in itself result in increased family violence.
- Alcohol, drugs and financial difficulties were cited as contributing factors in family violence.
- Police statistics indicate that 3% of their Criminal Code offences pertained to family violence.
- Family violence most often occurred on Saturdays during the months of June and July between the hours of 11:00 p.m. and midnight.

TASK FORCE

The recommendations and suggestions arising from the research conducted in phase 1 are varied indeed. What is required is a multi-faceted approach in dealing with the problem of family violence. The Task Force has confined the goals and objectives of phase 2 to those areas that the Committee considers to be within the competence of a project of this nature. These are the institution of:

- 1) An efficient public and professional education and development programme focusing on the services available for individuals involved in family violence, i.e. victims, assailants and their families.
- 2) A pilot project, utilizing the skills of a social worker(s), to work with police departments and the public, such programme designed to provide immediate assistance to families in the throes of experiencing violence within the family.

Phase 2 has been described as "multi-faceted". While only two areas have been identified, the successful implementation of these would be comprehensive as indicated by the following descriptions, hence the term "multi-faceted".

1) PUBLIC AND PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION AND DEVELOPMENT

- a) In response to the "Priorizing" of Recommendations questionnaire, a local prominent family lawyer wrote:

Until a programme of educating at public school level is started, much of the above will unfortunately be a waste of time.

Reaching this age group is considered to be of prime importance. To achieve this aim, the following is proposed:

In co-operation with professionals in the community, an education package would be prepared. Possibilities are:

TARGET GROUP

Education System of Kent County

- a) Elementary students
- b) Secondary students
- c) Post-Secondary students

METHODOLOGY

- to be used or developed, suited to specific age group with built in feedback and evaluation mechanism:

 1. Audio-visual programme
 2. Puppet plays
 3. Drama presentation
 4. Public speaking
 5. Essay writing contest, etc.

- b) A telephone survey of Social Service Agencies and professionals in the community identified many gaps in services. A significant number of respondents stressed the fact that existing services were not being fully utilized, one of the reasons being that some pro-

. . Professionals were not aware of the services offered in other agencies.

In response to this comment, the following is proposed:

TARGET GROUP

METHODOLOGY

Professionals throughout Kent County.

- methods designed with built in feedback and evaluation.

a) Police (11 departments)

1. Education

b) Social Service Deliverers (including volunteers)

- a) Workshops
- b) Information Packages
- c) In-service training

c) Educators

2. Development:

d) Clergy

Co-operative team management system for those who have indicated a mandated obligation to provide service to individuals involved in family violence. Thus far, these agencies are:

e) Lawyers

- Children's Aid Society
- Community & Family Services
- Legal Assistance Kent
- Lester B. Pearson Centre
- Police
- Chatham-Kent Women's Centre

f) Doctors

c) Another reason put forward as to why existing services were not being full utilized was that the public was not well enough informed as to available services. In response to this comment, the following is proposed:

TARGET GROUP

METHODOLOGY

Community of Kent County

- methods designed with built in feedback and evaluation:

a) Service Groups

1. Speaker's package - facts

b) Church Organizations

2. Media e.g. Cable Television, radio, and County-wide newspapers

c) Labour Groups

d) General Public

3. Actively Solicit speaking engagements.

e) Elected Officials

2. PILOT PROJECT

Officers responding to the Police Poll Questionnaire have indicated the following:

- 1) Families involved in domestic violence should seek professional help.
- 2) They do not have the time or skill to assess and refer families to this help.
- 3) Upon leaving the family, the officers feel uneasy because there is no connection to this help.

In response to these comments, the following is contemplated:

- 1) A Social Worker(s) in co-operation with police departments, providing immediate assistance to families who have recently experienced episodes of family violence. This assistance could take many forms, such as:

- i) Immediate follow-up, by way of visits, e.g. to such families.
- ii) Information with regard to services available to assist with their problems.
- iii) Referrals for counselling.
- iv) Referral follow-up.

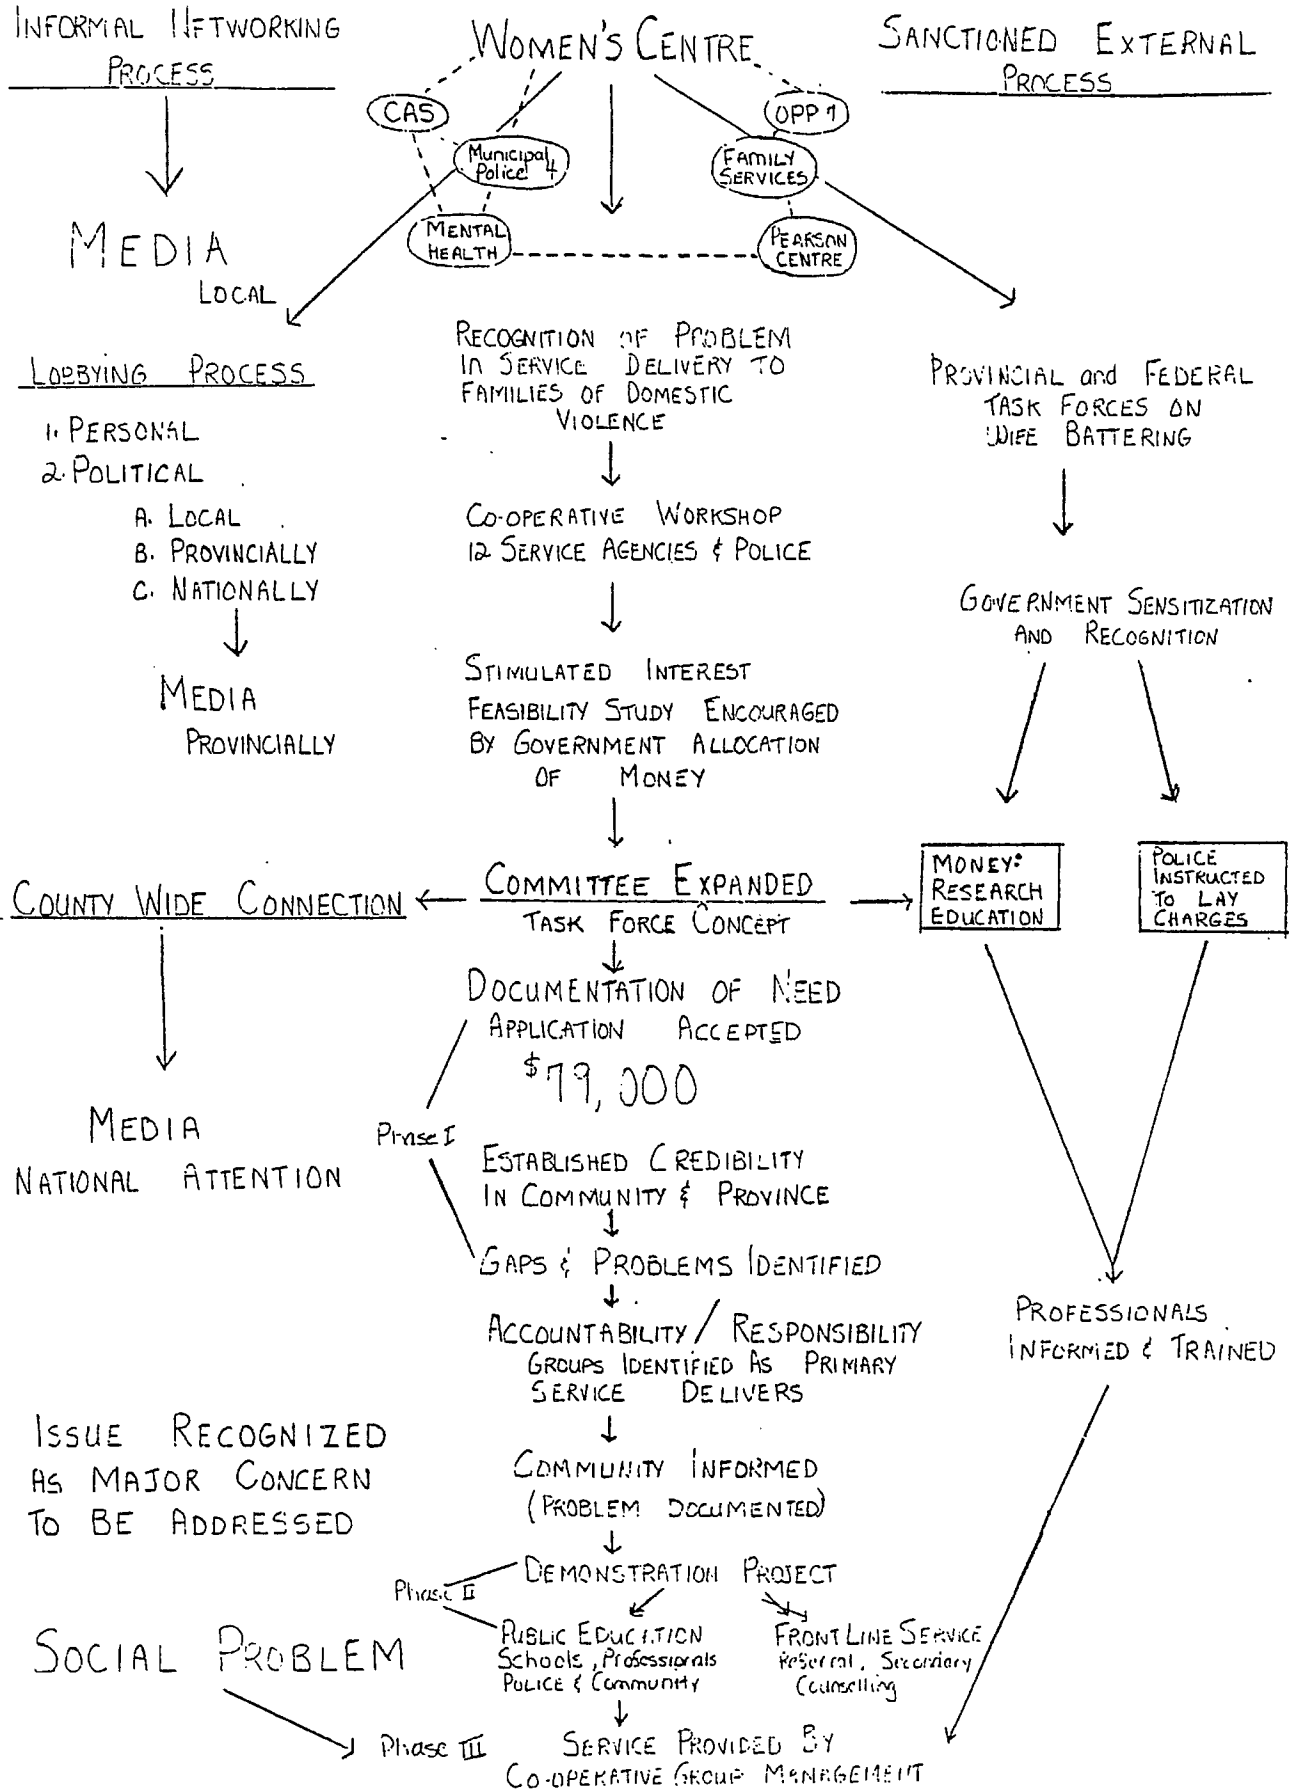

The logistics of this proposal would have to be carefully worked-out with the various police departments and social agencies that would be potentially involved.

The responses to the Public Poll Questionnaire have indicated that individuals do not usually report family violence. In response to this comment the following is proposed:

- 2) A central focal point accessible to individuals experiencing family violence providing the following assistance:
 - i) Information with regard to services available to assist with their problems.
 - ii) Referrals for counselling.
 - iii) Referral follow-up.
